Ian Svilokos, is a licensed architect, fabricator, and founder at the collaborative PIE – a research-based architecture, design and fabrication studio. While earning his Bachelor of Design in Architecture from the University of Florida, and his Masters in Architecture from Yale University, Ian spent time building single-family homes across the northeast. Upon completion of his Masters, he relocated to Bali, Indonesia to develop and design hyper-regional resorts with Karma Royal Group traveling to multiple properties across the globe.

He has been based in Los Angeles for a decade now, where he has led award-winning, multi-family and institutional projects including Pittsburgh's MuseumLab with KoningEizenberg Architecture, and the Guggenheim Abu Dhabi with Frank O. Gehry Partners.

He finds inspiration in working with various mediums to help projects find their greatest potential. Whether metal, earth, wood, or plant, his pursuits in design are informed by the unique opportunities each material presents. Ian uses his personal history and diverse knowledge base to find and design experiences unique to each project
